are scratched every minute in the United States and every one careless-ly thrown away is apt to produce a fire and help to keep the per capita fire loss in the country to $2.66 against eight cents in Austria in times of peace, and 53 cents in England. It is up to every person to help conserve the resources of the country by the prevention of fires the more so now during these times of scarcity of nearly every commodity that enters into our national life.

In addition to the enormous loss by fire each year which must be paid by every person there is an equal amount paid for the maintenance of the fire department. The large sum of $500.000.000 is paid out each year for losses and the maintenance of fire departments in the United States. All of these facts may help to impress upon the minds of every one as well as the school children the importance of this "Fire Prevention day". If every individual in the country will do his part in the prevention of fire the maintenance cost and the enormous fire losses can be lowered in the United State considerably.
